Leonardo Academy Antitrust Policy

The Leonardo Academy (the “Academy”) is a non-profit, ANSI-accredited standard developer organization. In that capacity, the Academy coordinates the involvement of numerous stakeholders (“Stakeholders”) in the development of various standards. While the Leonardo Academy itself adheres to stringent policies of neutrality and objectivity in the development a standard, such activities necessarily involve communications between competitors and are subject to scrutiny under applicable antitrust law.

Therefore, neither the Leonardo Academy nor any applicable Stakeholders, with respect to their involvement in the standard development process, shall engage in any activity constituting a violation of applicable antitrust law, including, without limitation, the following activities:

1. Exchanging information among competitors relating to cost, sales, profitability, prices, marketing, or distribution of any product, process, or service that is not reasonably required for the purpose of developing or promulgating a voluntary consensus standard, or using such standard in conformity assessment activities;
2. Entering into any agreement or engaging in any other conduct that would allocate a market with a competitor; or
3. Entering into any agreement or conspiracy that would set or restrain prices of any good or services.
